The Welsh Government is changing the default speed limit on restricted roads, where streetlights are placed no more than 200 yards apart, usually located in residential and built-up areas which people use frequently. Not all restricted roads will change to 20mph. Local authorities and the two trunk road agents in Wales, have used Welsh Government guidance and worked with communities to inform which roads should remain at 30mph (these are known as exceptions). Transport for Wales - together with Welsh Government - will be hosting drop in public information events about the new 20mph speed limits & the exceptions on the A479 at Talgarth and on the A40 at Bwlch. These events will give members of the public an opportunity to find out more about the changes relating to the A40 and the A479, view maps, speak to representatives from the Trunk Road Agent, Welsh Government and ask any questions they might have. Where:
